

Biography

SPAWN is a high energy brass fuelled skapunk band from the Netherlands, keeping the beat rocksteady and the upstrokes a-skankin'. The band consist of guitar, bass, drums, keys, horns and vocals.

In October 2016, SPAWN released "Dance of the Lunatics". "With their third album, they've definitely found the groove and locked it down. "Dance of the Lunatics" is a huge, bouncing, sweaty dance machine perched on 14 legs and having the time of its life." [Louder Than War, 2016] The new album is available on all major streaming and music platforms, such as Spotify, iTunes and Amazon.

Since releasing "Dance of the Lunatics", SPAWN have featured on many Dutch, English and American radio shows and are planning a Dutch tour as we speak. Dozens of venues have already booked SPAWN for their 2017 club and festival season. "This is so much fun. You're gonna love this. Mega riffs, Killer beats and some serious funk. Fuuuunk!" [Soundsphere magazine, 2016]

SPAWN consist of Roel Wensink (guitar & lead vocals), Paul Heijnen (drums), David van Lochem (bass), Jaap Bulsink (keys), Erik Rhebergen (trumpet & backing vocals), Derk Wikkerink (saxophone & backing vocals) and Mark Koeleman (trombone, backing vocals & percussion).

SPAWN was formed in 2001 as punk trio. Adding a trumpet player in 2002 and a saxophone player in 2004, at that time the band switched to playing ska music with a punky twist. SPAWNTANEOUS was released in 2005 (album of the month at the National Pop Institute). Their music video "Spam" was broadcast by MTV Networks for several weeks, earning the band national exposure. HOSDROPLOS was released in 2008, gaining access to major Dutch venues like Paradiso and Zwarte Cross Festival.

Having played more than 200 shows, SPAWN knows how to get the party started and going. They have been around for more than 15 years and "Dance of the Lunatics" proofs that they are far from done!
